The diagnosis of juvenile rheumatoid arthritis for a seven-year-old girl prompted her family to turn to RightResponse as a way to pay for medical expenses.

Soon after the diagnosis, the girl's parents and grandparents went to work to raise funds.

The grandmother, who worked at a large organization, left order sheets and a letter about her granddaughter's condition in break rooms around the company.

Touched by the appeal, coworkers began ordering RightResponse kits to support the little girl. Other sales came in as word spread, reaching far beyond the family's expectations.

Within a month, the family recorded $2,200 in sales, raising $1,100 to pay for the girl's health expenses.

“You don't have to be a large organization to benefit from a healthy fundraiser such as RightResponse.”
